What's going on with

Khalil Mack?

By Cayden Davis

Let's talk about Khalil Mack, and the Oakland Raiders. An NFL agent who was consulted on Aug. 15 predicted that defensive lineman Aaron Donald and the Los Angeles Rams would agree on a new contract "in the next couple weeks," because the financial incentive for a player earning $6.9 million this season would be too great.

That deal appears right on schedule. The same agent predicted the Oakland Raiders' Khalil Mack would play out the 2018 season under his $13.8 million contract.

That scenario still seems plausible, but with the Raiders sounding indifferent toward a new deal for Mack, there is an opening to consider whether a trade could be realistic. The Oakland Raiders are thinking about trading Mack for two first round picks. Should they Trade Khalil Mack?

(UPDATE) Khalil Mack has officially been traded to the Chicago Bears. Many teams were interested in Khalil Mack. They had multiple different offers from multiple different teams. The Chicago Bears offered the most.

Why did the Raiders want to trade Khalil Mack in the first place? Khalil wants more money than what he is worth. He was already getting paid $13.846 million this upcoming season. Khalil just keeps asking for more. If Mack misses any games this season, that means he'll also be missing out on the $814,000 paycheck that comes with them, which is a lot of money to give up. Khalil also didn't show up to practice or minicamp. He didn't have a good relationship with Jon Gruden, the Oakland Raiders Head Coach. The Raiders are not concerned with Mack being gone because the younger players, are playing well in his absence.

TIGER WOODS

Tiger Woods won his 80th golf tournament on Sunday, September 23rd. After the whole ordeal about him being arrested fore [see what I did there?], DUI he has been very popular recently in the world of golf. It has been a LONG time, more than FIVE years than his last championship win. To be honest with you I say this coming A LONG WAY AWAY.

He's not my favorite golfer [sorry] but he's still really good. And that is the world of sports today, Jackson signing out.

RECAP OF THE BEGINNING OF THE YEAR

By Julia Robbins

This past week we have had some very school spirit filled events. From games to well, more games students have cheered each other on. From so early in the year we are all ready for more team and school spirit. From the Burning of George to the great raft race I'll tell you what you missed. Starting where it all begin the start of the football season or at least the kick of, The Burning of George. This was mostly for the higher grades but you had to be living under a rock to have not heard about it. There were announcements every day until that Thursday, some people already had shirts promoting it, and people were talking about it all week. So what all happened?

Well let me tell you it was quite much when you first arrive. The land in between the woodlawn annex and the chieftain center was filled with food vendors, games, a car, and people lots of people.

Right in the middle is a square blocked off with caution tape with a big bundle of wood in the middle. The High school band performed some great upbeat music as the Color guard danced their routines. Then it was about to begin, the coach made a speech and then the football team lit George ablaze and we had a beautiful bonfire.

The next night of course was the first game of the season. We started out strong and continued to do great at the end of the night the score was 34 to 13. We Won!! You can probably tell I'm not a great sports writer.. Anyway it was a great game, very exciting and all the props to our amazing team. The next day was the cross country meet.

To be honest I'm not sure what happened there because I didn't go but I'm sure we did great and I'm proud of my peers for going out and cross countrying.

Again not a sports writer.

We had a wonderful long weekend where I'm sure a lot of us enjoyed a good sleeping in. On that following Monday our STEM class went to the great raft race with cardboard boats they had made in class. There were boats of all different shapes and sizes. Mostly box shaped but there were some very creative disigns. Different shapes, sizes, and colors! The the class was only allowed to use cardboard and duct tape, lots of duct tape. Overall the school did win one trophy "most soaked". I'd say it's a pretty good achievement. With that the long weekend came to a end all the blue and white, running, and wet cardboard just a distant memory. Classes began and school was back in session.
