Merry Christmas!

Snow

By: Abigail Begines

The mysterious white
stuff falls to the ground

The mysterious white
stuff has no sound

It lightly floats from high to low

All as if it had places to go

I watch it as it tries to fly

But the sun comes out and it says goodbye

Don't worry, it'll be back soon

When the air is cool and out comes the moon

The mysterious white
stuff has many names

But for now we can call it something less lame

I have a name that should be given a bow

A name so neat, I call it
snow

How many cookies does Santa Eat?

How many cookies does santa really eat?
Well we put that to the test.

There is around 17.7 billion people
Subtract that by the 7.1 billion people who have chimneys
You get 16993000000.6

Then Subtract that by the 2 billion people who celebrate christmas

You get 14993000000

Subtract 1 million people who leave out cookies

Is 14992000000

And just for fun let's subtract the 5 million who leave milk

The Total Cookie And Milk Intake is 14987000000

Then if you want to see the calorie intake

Times That By 78(the average cookie calories)

You get 1.168986e+12 calories

Merry Christmas.

ALL IN ONE NIGHT

(i think)

Amy Cloverfield sat on her porch. A delicate white flake fell into her hot cocoa that was placed between her hands. The fragile snowflake melted as fast as it appeared. Amy looked over at her dog, Dart. Dart was snuggling against her legs for warmth. Amy stretched out a hand to pet the large Border Collie. Suddenly a noise made both Amy and Dart jump up. Amy dropped her cup, sending small shards of glass scattering against the concrete porch. The forest, that stood behind Amy's backyard, seemed to shiver as a young deer ran through it's bushes. The deer easily sprang over the wire fence, trying to escape from whatever was behind it. Dart ran up and barked at the fence, growling as a coyote peeked it's head from a bush.

"Dart," Amy yelled, her voice cracking in fear as she stared into the eyes of the coyote. "Come insi-"

Amy's voice was cut off by the barking. The coyote ran away, leaving the injured reindeer behind. Amy rushed up to the reindeer and held it in her arms. She noticed that the reindeer had a rosy red nose. Amy smiled, the deer seemed like an ironic message. "Don't worry Rudolph," Amy said. "I'll get you help." Amy carried the red-nosed reindeer off to get help.
